Movement

Water

I grant life,
And allow death,
I am either not wanted,
Or suddenly needed,
I go around in cycles,
Ever-going and non-stopping,
In different forms,
I stay the same,
You can find me everywhere you go,
For 70% of you is me,
Hidden around the world or obviously placed,
You see me every day,
In several ways,
I am forever and always there,
For I am Water.

Copper

Day after day,
It's all the same,
Sitting, waiting, and watching others grow,
While I am placed under the mountain alone,
It seems like centuries have gone by,
So long I've turned green,
My misery just grew and grew,
Until I heard the word Bonanza,
My life shifted since then,
I left my old prison piece by piece,
To a place where I can become new,

Day after day,
It's all the same,
Falling, breaking, and tumbling through stages,
While I am sent through the machines broken,
It has been years now,
I regret what I took for granted,
Now I am scattered all over the nation,
Longing to go back to the mountain,
To a place that I once knew.

Rocks

No matter what happens I always remain,
It takes time but I don't go away,
Whether I am a boulder or a sand grain,
I will forever stay,

If I fall apart,
If I change,
I always get a restart,
Even if it's strange,

I will always be around,
I can neither die nor live,
For I am your ground,
And fertile dirt I give,

It takes time,
Heat and pressure too,
Until I get to my prime,
Until I get made anew.

Seeds

In the wind I blow,
My final destination I do not know,
Having no idea where I'll go,

Through the air I glide,
Oh, way up high,
Around the big blue sky,

Looking around for a place to land,
It doesn't have to be anything grand,
Just some ground where I can stand,
And probably expand,

Hopefully to a place full of fun,
Where I can soak up the sun,
Until my time is done.
